AngularJS is a JavaScript framework maintained by Google. AngularJS developers are needed to develop browser, desktop and mobile applications - those where you can quickly and seamlessly navigate the site.

Angular applications are made up of independent elements by AngularJS developers. These elements are called components, and each component has different behavior.

For example, a news feed is one component. Responsible for displaying the news list on the page. The Read button is another component. Responsible for switching from the news list page to the selected news.

Typically, a component is programmed by AngularJS development companies so that it displays an element on the screen and performs some kind of action. A component can respond to a click, collapse, expand, hide, redirect to another page, and so on.

Components obey life cycles - they change and work according to several programmed scenarios. Let's take a situation where we go from a news list page to a single news item. In this case, the "News Feed" component is destroyed and, if necessary, recreated. Lifecycles offload memory and speed up the application.

Angular is a framework for experienced front-end developers. It is not taken from scratch programming courses because AngularJS web development requires general knowledge in HTML, CSS, JavaScript, TypeScript, Git, and GitHub. In our new listing, we have compiled a base of experienced AngularJS developers who specialize in AngularJS development.
