Only a person who has no external connections with the outside world has not heard about big data today. Yet, knowing where to look when you need a good contractor is not always clear to non-specialists.

Every year, the amount of information generated by a person increases. By 2020, the volume of stored data will increase to 40-44 zettabytes (1 ST ~ 1 billion GB). By 2025, it will be at about 400 zettabytes. Accordingly, the management of structured and unstructured data using modern technology is an area that is becoming increasingly important. Individual companies and entire states are interested in big data.

The big data market is growing by several tens of percent annually. According to experts, this trend will continue. Thus, according to Frost & Sullivan, the total world market for big data analytics will increase to $ 67.2 billion by 2021. The annual growth will be about 35.9%.

Big data analytics can identify extremely valuable information from structured or unstructured data sets. For example, a business can determine trends, forecast production indicators, and optimize its own expenses. It is clear that in order to reduce costs, companies need to be ready to introduce the latest solutions.

Big data analytics is now used by more than 50% of companies worldwide. Despite that fact, this figure was only at 17% in 2015. Big data is most actively used by companies that work in the field of telecommunications and financial services. Then, it is used by companies that specialize in technology and health care. Minimal use of big data analytics in educational companies: in most cases, representatives of this field announce their intention to use technology in the near future.

In the USA, big data analytics is used most actively: more than 55% of companies from various fields work with this technology. In Europe and Asia, the demand for big data analytics is not much lower – at about 53%.

We have analyzed and compiled a list of the most reputable companies which you can entrust your project to based on big data analysis.
