The demand for mobile applications from different types of business is constantly growing and it still significantly exceeds the market offer, which leads to a constant rise in price of mobile app development. With the growing market for mobile applications, developers have become not just expensive, but very expensive, and native development is not something that every business owner can afford. But refusing to develop a mobile application in the future may cost you more. One of the solutions to reduce the cost of this process is cross-platform development when the same code is used on all mobile platforms.

Cross-platform applications are written simultaneously for several platforms in one language, different from the native one. We have compiled a list of top companies that specialize in cross-platform application development and who you can trust your mobile app project.
