Magento is a site management system for online stores with fairly rich capabilities. The system is very widespread and it has the most advanced set of functionality among similar systems.

Magento is written in PHP and using relational databases. Magento is used as a platform for developing online stores. There is a paid version with support from the manufacturer and a free Open Source Edition, developed by magento development companies. Magento is owned by eBay. The system can be improved by writing additional software modules or using existing ones created by a third party (paid and free).

The features of Magento web development include:

- A wide range of functionality in the basic version: multilingualism, the use of several currencies, flexible adjustment of discounts, etc.;
- The ability to deploy multiple stores using a single centralized control panel;
- Flexible configuration of user rights by the administrative part;

Magento capabilities

In addition to the functions of the online store itself, Magento development company can provide the following capabilities:

- Automatic maintenance of statistics of sales, orders, deliveries, setting up tax rules;
- Product catalog management: product sections, products themselves, attributes (filters), search queries, product ratings;
- Management of users, user groups;
- Flexible pricing tools: multilevel pricing and pricing rules, coupons, sales organization, bulk discounts;
- Creation of separate text pages;
- Automatic maintenance of statistics: sales, carts (including abandoned ones), statistics on product views, bestsellers, reviews, search queries, etc.
- Data Import and Export + Magento DataFlow is an object-oriented library that allows the programmer to write their import and export modules.
- Modularity - the system is initially designed for a modular architecture, the core consists of several modules and can be easily extended by custom Magento development and third-party plugins (paid and free).
- Convenient SEO: full control over HTML markup, it is possible to set an individual HTML template for a specific product or product section, for each page (product, section or text) you can set individual parameters for search engine optimization, which allows you to set an individual URL for each product and product section -address, Megento automatically creates a map for the site in XML format for search robots;
