WordPress is the most widely used CMS today. According to the independent agency Web Technology Surveys for July 2020, this CMS is used in 38.2% of sites or 63.5% of those that are based on CMS.

Initially, CMS was developed as a system for creating a personal blog. Basic functionality makes it possible to maintain a news feed, display filters by tags and a calendar of publications. Site users can leave comments on news and register in the system.

In 2018, WordPress has become not only a tool for creating blogs and small promotional sites, but a full-fledged commercial solution with the functionality of complex and high-load portals and online stores with complex logic. The sites of companies such as New York Observer, New York Post, TED, Fortune.com, TIME.com, CBS Local, Williams, Spotify, CNN, and others use WordPress.

We have compiled a list of the best companies that specialize in developing solutions for WordPress.
